Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 27 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Mostly fine and warm today.

Today:
Early fog patches soon clearing, then most parts dry with sunny spells. Feeling warmer than recently with light winds. Clouding over in the far west with some rain later.

Tonight:
Thickening cloud bringing outbreaks of rain to some western parts. Clearer skies in parts of the north and east where it will turn chilly with a few fog patches.

Friday:
Mostly cloudy across western and some central areas with some rain at times. Drier and brighter in parts of the east and far north where it may feel quite warm.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Largely dry with increasing amounts of sunshine and warm for most. Isolated showers on Saturday. Feeling cooler along the east coast. Maybe turning unsettled into the far northwest later Monday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.